POLITICAL VIOLENCE REPORT

July 2008

7 November 2008

A report by the Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum

OVERVIEW

Even after the disputed Presidential election Run-Off and subsequent swearing in of the ZANU PF candidate Robert Mugabe as the President of Zimbabwe, violence and political intolerance continued in the month of July in most parts of Zimbabwe. Retributive attacks by ZANU PF youths and war veterans on known and suspected MDC supporters continued to occur as characteristic of the period before the 27 June 2008, Presidential election Run-Off. However, the scale at which these violations occurred was significantly lower as compared to the period between April and June 2008.

ZANU PF youth militias launched “operation red finger” in both rural and urban areas, an operation that targeted those who did not vote in the Presidential Election Run-off. Those who did not vote were accused of not doing so in protest at the one-man election and were subjected to violent attacks by ZANU PF youth militia. Election observers in the March Harmonised elections who did not assume the same role in the 27 June presidential election run-off were also targeted and accused of being MDC supporters because of their non-participation in the latter.

Evidence available to the Human Rights Forum also reveals that the torture bases that were set up prior to the 27 June Presidential Election Run-off by ZANU PF youths and war veterans were still operational after the election, and were being used to terrorise residents in rural areas. In some of the cases documented in this report, the victims were taken to these torture bases and severely assaulted as characteristic of attacks prior to 27 June. The continued existence of these torture bases has relegated some rural communities into no-go areas controlled by ZANU PF youths. This has also exacerbated the crisis of internally displaced persons who fled from violence prior to the Presidential election Run-Off. Many of these people have been attacked after having tried to return to their homes and have been forced to go back into hiding. Other victims of the post electoral violence were also targeted for attack after having reported the incidence to the police.

The number of violations recorded in this report is significantly lower than those recorded in April, May and June. The report documents a total of 227 violations as compared to the June total of 1126. The number of cases of torture recorded 6 against 35, was also significantly lower compared to those recorded in the same period. This can be attributed to the fact that the elections were over and the end that was sought to be achieved by the violence met. While substantially lower than the 60 recorded in June, there were still 19 murders reported in July.

While the signing of the Memorandum of Understanding on 21 July 2008 gave some encouragement that the impasse in the negotiation process between ZANU PF and the two MDC formations was being addressed, the will of the political parties to bring a speedy end to the Zimbabwean crisis remained in question. The continuation of violence, including retributive violence and the lack of political tolerance remains worrying. The scorched earth policy of ZANU PF youth and some war veterans particularly evident in June in the rural areas, continued to a lesser extent in July with a slight shift towards peri-urban areas. Equally worrying are some of the incidences reported which showed overt participation of state agents.

The Human Rights Forum calls upon all parties to the MOU and Power Sharing agreement to honour their commitments and to take steps to ensure the resolution of the Zimbabwean problem. The Human Rights Forum also calls upon the parties to ensure justice for the victims of the pre-electoral and post-electoral violence that occurred in 2008 and prior to this period.

Note: The identities of victims whose names have not been published in the press and are not public officials are protected. This is done in order to protect the victim from further violence, intimidation and possible recriminatory attacks.

The purpose of this report is to record the nature of the politically motivated violence and intimidation that continues to prevail in the country. The Monthly Political Violence Reports are primarily based on victims' accounts, accompanied by medical evidence where possible, obtained from member organisations of the Forum and other partner organisations. Use is also made of press reports.

The Report cannot be considered as the exhaustive record of all incidents of politically motivated violence in Zimbabwe in the period under review. Nevertheless, every incident reported to the Human Rights Forum directly or through its members is meticulously documented and included in the reports. Care is also taken to record the incidents in the language in which they were reported to the Forum.

The situation prevailing in the country is such that it has not been possible to verify all of these accounts. The Human Rights Forum has done what it can to verify the reports, and is satisfied that the vast majority of them are substantially true.
